The Unstoppable Power of Leaderless Organizations. The Starfish and the Crawler: The Unstoppable Power of Leaderless Organizations is a 2006 publication by Ori Brafman and also Rod Beckstrom is an exploration of the implications of the current increase of decentralized organizations such as Grokster as well as YouTube. The Starfish as well as the Crawler suggest that companies fall into 2 categories: conventional "crawlers," which have a stiff pecking order as well as top-down management, and also advanced "starfish," which rely upon the power of peer connections.
